Though it's no secret that the former Greater St. Matthew Baptist Church is slated for residential conversion, Hidden City reports that developer Alon Barzilay has a name for his new project: Sanctuary Lofts. Designed by architect Peter Lazor, the development's plans include 38 apartments for the former church and its rectory.

Though Barzilay wouldn't comment to Hidden City about a timeline, there's no question the conversion is moving forward. Former church members are pleased with the plans, which include a strong eye toward preservation.
